

An Unsung Hero

Yip Man Chun

Do you know that in our daily life, we will meet a lot of unsung heroes? They are not any super heroes. They also live among us. Maybe they are now near you! They will help us without wanting to be paid back. Now, let me share a story about an unsung hero.

Last Monday was just a normal day: the sun rose very early and the sky was blue. I carried my heavy school bag and a big bag to school like normal. On my way to school, I saw an old woman who was pushing a trolley, and there were a lot of cardboard boxes on it. She pushed it through a very crowded street. However, the trolley was too big. Many people kept bumping into it. Suddenly, all of the cardboard boxes fell on the floor. The old woman stopped and picked them up slowly. When I saw that, I was very angry because no one helped her to pick them up and some people even stepped on them!

Suddenly, a man came and helped the old lady to pick up all the cardboard. Besides, he helped the old woman to push the trolley to where she wanted to go. I saw that the old woman was touched. Her eyes were full of tears. After helping her, the man ran as fast as he could to catch the mini bus. The old woman wanted to thank the man. However, the man had run away already.

This action touched me a lot. I think this man is a real hero. I learnt a lot from him. I know that although he was in a hurry, he sacrificed his time and stopped to help someone who was in need. After that day, he became my role model. I hope I can help the needy and have a kind heart like him!